EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Maher Carrizo's emergence at Vélez Sarsfield has caught the attention of leading scouts worldwide. This season has marked his breakout year, with 7 goals in 18 matches as a starter across all competitions and a standout performance in the Copa Libertadores, contributing 4 goals and 1 assist in just 5 appearances. His release clause, set at €16M, reflects the value attributed to this promising footballer, whose destiny appears to lie in European football.

TECHNICAL ANALYSIS

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

Versatility is one of his greatest strengths, feeling comfortable both on the wings and in attacking midfield roles (as a number 10), or even as a central forward. This positional adaptability across the entire front line significantly broadens the tactical options for any coaching staff that brings him in.

PHYSICAL AND MENTAL ASPECTS

With experience at Argentina's U17 and U20 national teams, and after being the top scorer in Vélez's youth ranks, his first-team debut in early 2024 was the logical next step in a sustained progression. This precocity, combined with his versatility, has put him on the radar of clubs such as Arsenal, Manchester City, Manchester United, and Wolves, while in Argentina, River Plate views him as a possible successor to talents such as Mastantuono.
