EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Mihajlo Cvetković is emerging as one of the brightest young talents in Serbian and European football. Formed at Čukarički, he made his first-division debut at just 16 and quickly left his mark, later scoring the fastest goal in Serbian SuperLiga history and earning his first senior national team call-up in March 2025. His move to RSC Anderlecht in April 2025 places him within a club with a strong track record of developing Balkan forwards into European stars.

TECHNICAL ANALYSIS

His standout trait is clinical finishing in key moments, evidenced by his record-breaking goal and his decisive performances at youth international level. He combines composure in front of goal with the movement patterns typical of a modern number 9, able to finish across different types of chances rather than relying on a single pattern of play.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

Cvetković shows attacking versatility and the tactical intelligence to adapt his movement to different systems, which allowed him to stand out at the U-17 European Championship with four goals and a place in the tournament's Best XI. This adaptability suggests a forward capable of fitting into varied attacking structures rather than requiring a single rigid role.

PHYSICAL AND MENTAL ASPECTS

Despite his age, he has already shown competitive maturity in high-pressure matches, both at club level — debuting and scoring landmark goals as a teenager — and at international youth level, where he was decisive in a major tournament. This combination of composure and performance under pressure is a strong indicator for his continued development.
