EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Samuele Inacio's move to Borussia Dortmund's U19 squad from Atalanta's prestigious academy is considered a strategic masterstroke by the German club, who beat out Bayern Munich and Liverpool for his signature. His true breakout came at the 2024 UEFA U17 EURO in Albania, where he won the Golden Boot, scoring 5 goals in 4 matches against strong opponents including England, Belgium, and the Czech Republic.

TECHNICAL ANALYSIS

His profile is defined by elite ball control and refined footwork, complemented by great finishing ability with both feet. This technical versatility, evident throughout his progression at Atalanta's youth ranks, allowed him to consistently produce goal returns across multiple youth national team age groups.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

Inacio shows strong instincts for link-up play, a quality that supported his standout performance at the U17 European Championship, where he led Italy's attack despite the team's eventual semi-final exit on penalties to Portugal. His creativity and attacking instinct, first identified during his development at Atalanta, translate into a player capable of both creating and finishing chances.

PHYSICAL AND MENTAL ASPECTS

Raised in Bergamo in a footballing family — his father Piá was a professional player in Brazil, and his uncle Joelson also played the game — Inacio has been described as a confessed admirer of De Bruyne and Neymar, combining pure flair with an advanced footballing vision. Dortmund's scouting team, led by Sebastian Kehl, moved quickly to secure his signature, reflecting strong confidence in his physical and mental readiness to progress within an elite academy system.
