EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Tobías Ramírez projects as Argentina's next major defensive export, combining an aggressive style of play with strong anticipation and early exposure to high-level competition. After debuting professionally against River Plate and logging Copa Sudamericana minutes at just 17, he has emerged as one of the standout defensive talents of the 2006 generation in South America, a product of the well-regarded Argentinos Juniors academy.

TECHNICAL ANALYSIS

At 1.85m and right-footed, Ramírez unusually operates on the left side of a back four, where he shows excellent mobility and defensive instincts. His main technical strengths lie in ground duels, reading loose balls, and a high ability to build play from the back — qualities that support a proactive, modern centre-back profile.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

He shows strong comfort defending with a high line, recovering space quickly and anticipating danger before it materialises. This makes him an ideal fit for teams that play with an aggressive defensive structure rather than a purely reactive back line.

PHYSICAL AND MENTAL ASPECTS

His performances at the U-17 World Cup and the South American Championship, combined with senior debut minutes against River Plate at 17, reflect strong competitive maturity for his age. A data-driven scouting analysis placed him among the top Under-18 centre-backs globally for his 'aggressor profile', alongside names such as Luka Vušković and Pau Cubarsí — a notable external validation of his standing among his age group.

KEY DATA POINTS

- Professional debut against River Plate at age 17.
- Minutes played in the Copa Sudamericana at age 17.
- Included among the world's top U-18 centre-backs by a data-driven scouting analysis.
- Height: 1.85m (6'1").

STRENGTHS AND WEAKNESSES

Strengths

- Success in ground duels.
- Comfort defending with a high line.
- High ability to build play from the back.

Areas for Improvement / Limitations

- Limited in aerial duels.
- Struggles with his weaker left foot when under pressure.

PROJECTION AND CONCLUSION

Ramírez is still a developing talent, but one with immense potential. He possesses the DNA of a modern, proactive centre-back, and his profile is already being watched closely by clubs in Europe. Continued refinement of his aerial game and left-foot execution under pressure will be key markers to track as he progresses toward a potential move abroad.
