EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Cuiabano combines impressive physical strength with remarkable creative flair, establishing himself as a true engine on his flank. A product of Grêmio's academy, he has experienced a meteoric rise at Botafogo, contributing significantly to the club's Copa Libertadores and Brasileirão double in 2024. His performance last season — 38 league appearances, 5 goals, and 3 assists — has attracted growing interest from top-tier European clubs, with Brighton's two bids already rejected and scouts from Manchester United, Tottenham, and Nottingham Forest closely monitoring him.

TECHNICAL ANALYSIS

In offensive transitions, Cuiabano is a blazing outlet, driving along the byline and delivering high-quality low crosses, several of which have been worthy of 'Goal of the Month' contention, in addition to unleashing powerful shots from distance. His play isn't limited to passing; he advances aggressively, becoming a genuine threat in possession.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

As a physically imposing left-back, Cuiabano stands out remarkably in Brazil's Série A, ranking in the top percentiles for chance creation and xG difference — unusual statistics for a defender. This attacking output, combined with his willingness to dominate key duels, positions him closer to a wing-back profile than a traditional defensive full-back.

PHYSICAL AND MENTAL ASPECTS

His aggressiveness and effectiveness in ball recovery reflect a competitive, high-intensity approach to the game, consistent with a player who has already contributed to major continental and domestic titles at just 22. This competitive edge is a clear strength, though it also produces the tactical discipline issues noted in his defensive play.

Refining his defensive positioning and duel discipline will be key markers to track as European interest continues to build around him.
